Hair Structure

Hair is composed of strong structural protein called keratin.

This is the same kind of protein that makes up the nails and the outer layer of skin.

Each strand of hair consists of three layers:
- An innermost layer or medulla which is only present in large thick hairs.
- The middle layer known as the cortex. The cortex provides strength and both the color and the texture of hair.
- The outermost layer is known as the cuticle. The cuticle is thin.

Fast Care D and Dan Off Shampoo

Affects the scalp and causes flakes of skin to appear – it is a common condition. Dandruff is a common scalp disorder affecting almost 50% of the population at the post-pubertal age and of any sex and ethnicity.

- Dandruff is also known as scurf – its medical term is Pityriasis capitis.
- This is a skin condition in which the skin becomes inflamed. Seborrheic dermatitis of the scalp is a severe form of dandruff. When it affects the scalp most people refer to it as dandruff. Seborrheic dermatitis causes larger, greasier flakes than most other types of dandruff.

- Dry skin. Simple dry skin — the kind you get during winter when the air is cold and rooms are overheated — is the most common cause of itchy, flaking skin. Flakes from dry skin are generally smaller and less oily than those from other causes of dandruff.

- Oily skin (seborrheic dermatitis). This condition, a frequent cause of dandruff, is marked by red, greasy skin covered with flaky white or yellow scales. Seborrheic dermatitis affects not only your scalp but also other areas rich in oil glands, such as your eyebrows, the sides of your nose and the backs of your ears, your breastbone, your groin area.

- Not shampooing often enough. If you don’t regularly wash your hair, oils and skin cells from your scalp can build up, causing dandruff.
- Psoriasis. This skin disorder causes an accumulation of dead skin cells that form thick silvery scales. Psoriasis commonly occurs on your knees, elbows and trunk, but it can also affect your scalp.

- Eczema. If you have eczema on your scalp, it’s possible you could develop dandruff. Sensitivity to hair care products (contact dermatitis). Sometimes sensitivities to certain hair care products or hair dyes can cause a red, itchy, scaling scalp. Shampooing too often or using Treatment of Dandruff

ROMIX Skin cream

Whitening – anti wrinkles - sunscreen

ROMIX:

Complete cell turnover takes place every 28 to 30 days when we are young, while the same process takes 45 to 50 days when we are in our sixties. This is one of the reasons why skin loses its freshness with age.

ROMIX:

The collagen layer of our skin is especially susceptible to free radical damage that arises from sun and pollution exposure, resulting in a process known as cross-linking.

Cross-linking of the collagen molecules makes them become stiff and inflexible eventually resulting in skin that looks and feels old and leathery.

ROMIX Contains:

Lecithin – Tocopherol – Retinol - Ascorbyl Palitate (Vit. C)

Soya protein – licorice - Lavender Ext, propylene glycol - Bearberry Extract - Titanium dioxide

Romix:
